PLANS FOR G. A. R. REUNION AT CHATTANOOGA

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 29.—There is a movement among prominent confederate veterans in the south to have a special committee appointed from their organization in each state to be in Chattanooga on the occasion of the 47th national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and do everything possible to make the Union veterans feel that the gray army appreciates the coming to the south of the men who wore the blue.

This proposition was at first advanced by Capt. J. R. Gibbons, of Bauxite, Ark. Capt. Gibbons attended the reunion at Gettysburg, and is enthusiastic over the reception in Pennsylvania of the veterans who wore the gray. He says in a letter to Capt. J. F. Shipp that he has "never had his uniform so honored as by the Grand Army at Gettysburg."

Capt. J. F. Shipp, of this city, another Confederate veteran, attended the Gettysburg reunion also, and is in hearty accord with the plan suggested by Capt. Gibbons. Capt. Shipp reports to the Chattanooga Encampment Association that his reception by the Grand Army men at Gettysburg was most cordial, and he is doing all he can to have the favors that he and his comrades enjoyed at Gettysburg paid back here during the encampment.

The Union soldiers of the north are assured of a most hearty welcome to Chattanooga and a whole week of proverbial southern hospitality awaits them. Confederate veterans are leading in this feature of the work and are anxious for the time to arrive when the streets of the city will be lined with veterans wearing the Blue uniform.

MURDERED AT DALLAS

FLORENCE BROWN, PROMINENT YOUNG WOMAN, VICTIM OF ASSASSIN.

Dallas, July 29.—Bathed in her own blood, her throat gashed from ear to ear and with bruises on many parts of her body, the lifeless form of Miss Florence T. Brown, 28 years of age, was found shortly before 9 o'clock Monday morning in the lavatory of the real estate office of Robinson & Styron, 110 Field street. The slayer had made his escape taking with him the weapon used in committing the crime.

Although scores of officers have been working on the case it is shrouded in the deepest mystery. There were no indications that the young woman had been criminally assaulted. She was a stenographer in the office where the murder was committed.

During the day officers made dozens of arrests of suspicious characters. Sheriff Brandenburg and a detail of deputies visited different parts of the county. North of the city it is said a white man wearing a blood-stained shirt and blood-stained trousers was seen going toward Sherman. The sheriff, however, was unable to overtake him.

Chief of Police Ryan, assistant Chief Brown and a detail of police detectives have been working desperately to apprehend the slayer or to find some motive for the crime. Efforts in this regard have completely failed.

Miss Brown was a prominent young woman. She was a consistent church worker. She was the daughter of Patrolman J. Randolph Brown, one of the best known members of the police force. He was the first officer to reach the scene of the murder. On viewing the body he collapsed and medical aid was necessary. He was taken to his home, where he informed his wife of the tragedy. Miss Brown has one sister, Mrs. Mary, and two brothers, William Brown of Dallas and Percy Brown of Denver, Colo.

The body of the young woman had been bitten in several places. Blood spurted from these wounds. Some of them were so deep that a wax impression of the wounds was taken and furnished the police. The head was almost severed from the body. This wound must have been made with an extremely sharp knife or a razor. Over the right eye was a deep gash. This might have been caused by a blow from a pistol or some blunt instrument.

Over the right temple was a purple bruise, which scarcely broke the skin, and below the right ear were a number of scratches which might have been caused by finger nails. The imprints of teeth were on the arms and hands.

The murderer apparently had washed his hands before leaving the room. He took all weapons with him.

Several physicians were summoned to the scene, but life was extinct and the body was sent to the morgue.

Officers have in charge a number of suspicious characters. Most of them are being held as witnesses. No blood stains were found on any of their clothes, and for this reason officers are of the opinion that none of them are guilty. Several motives have been offered but the mystery cannot be solved. The crime has created possibly the greatest sensation the city has ever had.

To Pay Seminole Indians.

Muskogee, Ok., July 28.—It was announced here today that the government will make a $200 per capita payment to the Seminole Indians at We-woka, beginning July 30. Payment will be made only to three quarter bloods up, and those below three quarter blood will receive no money at this time. The Indian Agent must first figure their rates.

REAPING WHAT HE SOWED

RISE AND FALL OF LAUTERBACH. FORGOT FAITHFUL WIFE IN TIME OF PROSPERITY.

New York, July 29.—"There is one man in New York at the present time who is, perhaps, entitled to more favors at the hands of his party than any other citizen of this state."

The paragraph was written of Edward Lauterbach in 1898 when he was a leader among the republicans, a man of high place in the law, of weight in finance, a connoisseur of art, the owner of a fine home in the richest millionaire block in the world.

And then—
Consider Edward Lauterbach, cowering before the lobby investigating committee at Washington, almost tearfully making the admission that he had lied to Lewis Cass Ledyard in an effort to get employment, and had lied by saying that he could hold out influence with democrats, in a democratic administration, that the corporations might profit by the weakness of the popular representatives.

Such, in a fast, impressionistic outline, is the story of the fall of Edward Lauterbach, the eclipse of a man who rose from poverty to high place, only to lose his place and his fortune in the big mire of finance and politics.

Lauterbach today presents the miserable spectacle of being arraigned as the working partner of David Lamar, a party to his schemes and the benefactor of the evil genius of the subtle "wolf" whose snapping was directed at all men—except Lauterbach. And verily the friendship of the "wolf" was more blighting than his enmity.

Out of the haze of obscurity came Lauterbach. His father was Solon Lauterbach; his mother Mina. He was born August 12, 1844, in this city. He went to the public schools, then to the College of the City of New York, whence he was graduated in 1864. He was admitted to the bar in 1866 and was first employed with the firm of Townsend, Dyett & Morrison. He progressed until in 1877 he became a member of the firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson. Many important law cases came his way. He grew rich.

He was a director in many corporations. At one time he was president of the Alabama Great Southern railway, one of the chief links in the Southern system. In the Emigrant Aid society the Society for Ethical Culture, the Home for Aged and Infirm, the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum, the Hebrew Technical institute and many other organizations he was a worker and officer.

Lauterbach was one of the state's big four at the national convention that named McKinley at St. Louis. He was chairman of the Republican county committee, and in 1898 was a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Murphy.

He became the right-hand man of Boss Platt, only to be side-tracked when he fought his chief and Lemuel Ely Quigg was given the Lauterbach scepter. In all of the political events of his party and his time he had a part and a voice. He championed the cause of the Jews at all times, sought to relieve their oppression at home and abroad, and in many ways earned the gratitude of many people who will never forget his goodly acts in the mass of condemnation he has brought upon himself.

The decline set in during the year 1908 when Lauterbach's son, Alfred, was killed in an automobile accident while crossing a bridge in Westchester. Lauterbach had married in his days of poverty, Amanda Friedman, who had saved a dot from the administration of her father's household expenses. She was a woman of grace in the days when she came to his home.

Shortly after the death of the son friends of the family heard that Lau-

Although the News does not doubt the sincerity and honesty of purpose of the County Excise Board which refused to submit to a vote of the tax payers of the Ada school district the question of an additional half-cent necessary to run the schools nine instead of eight months, it is of the opinion that a serious mistake was made. No danger of the people voting more taxes on themselves than they are willing to pay, and since they are the ones most vitally affected, it occurs to us that they should be given a chance to express themselves. The tax would amount to almost nothing in the way of a burden on the people, but to the children of the district it would mean a great deal.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE SUN DANCE

Of all the ceremonies indulged in by our Indians not one perhaps has been so universally misunderstood by the white man as the Sun Dance.

To the Indian, conversant with its true meaning, and believing in the efficacy of the ceremonies, he has never been able to fully understand why the dance has met with such universal condemnation. In his tribal state, before the white man came, it was the great event of the year. The Pawnees, Kiowas, Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Poncas, Creeks and Utes all freely indulged in it. To them it was nearly a condition of their existence. Their religious legends and teachings all bade them participate. To avoid it was Indian heresy. It brought together the entire tribe and at that time tribal interests and policies were discussed and acted on. Social intercourse was a strong factor in building tribal patriotism and love of their race. Lasting friendships were made and remain even to this day among the descendants of those who, in the years of long ago, participated. The young men looked forward to the events hopefully, wishing that the secret symbols and societies might include him—an honor that he devoutly wished, and by all his clan or village.

Among the tribes mentioned there existed a striking similarity, although minor details differed. The presence of blood during the ceremony among the Kiowas was an ill omen and usually meant the abandonment of the ceremony while the reverse characterized the Cheyennes.

The ceremony was divided into the secret rites and the public dance. The secret work was done in a tepee erected by the medicine men or priests for the exclusive purpose. Around the tepee the camp circle was erected in the form of a horseshoe with the opening to the east. The medicine men, within the secret tepee, prepared all the articles used by the performers, mixed the paints used by the warriors, and indulged in feasting, fasting and prayer. Signs were used for entrance to the tepee, known only to those who had been initiated and probably ceremonials indulged in that has never been divulged. Usually three days were consumed in the secret preparation for the dance and at its close, usually a large lodge was erected to be used for the public function and dance. Among some tribes—prior to the dance—tribal affairs, such as the passing upon the acts of the chief, discussions as to the future policy of the tribe, and many local matters such as certain clans or villages wished to bring to the attention of the entire tribe, were taken up. At those times the result of the deliberations as to all matters were always accepted as final and its adjudication was never after referred to only as law. The dancing could be indulged in by all the members of the tribe, if they so desired, but usually only the younger members participated. Often a period of fasting preceded the dance and after the dance each performer drank the black draught in order to thoroughly cleanse the body, followed by a period of sweating in a sweat house prepared for the purpose.

It is claimed, and seemingly true, that those who participated in the dance and the libations and rites which followed were better physically for the ordeal.

When the missionaries went among the Indians the ceremonies and rites were so opposed to Christian ideals—were seemingly pagan in their faith, and based upon a very vague and superstitious spiritual condition—that a strong sentiment developed against it. That sentiment grew as the red brother came to know more and more of the Christian faith, and

Spartanburg, S. C. May 10th, 1918
Peaslee-Gaulbert Co., Louisville, Ky.
Gentlemen—
After completing our village at New Holland, Pa., we experimented with some half dozen various brands of paint by dividing our village into sections of ten houses each and painting each ten with a different brand.
On one section of ten houses we used Lead and Oil, the other five sections we used paints mostly used in this section, and considered to be the leading brands.
After eight years we find that the ten cottages covered with "MASTIC PAINT" are in better condition and stood the test better than any of the others. They were all of the same architecture, weatherboarded with long leaf yellow pine of the same grade, having same exposure to the sun that is, none of them were partially protected by shade trees, but fully exposed.
We are well pleased with the results of the "MASTIC PAINT" and can heartily recommend same to any one who is a buyer.
Yours truly, year after year the institution declined until today its celebration is but a memory. The last Sun Dance to be celebrated public in Oklahoma, under full ceremonial, was in 1910, and at that time the affair was so contaminated with whiskey that the Indians opposed a further attempt to revive it.

COUNTRY COURTS HAVE JURISDICTION

Muskogee, Okla., July 28.—Holding that Oklahoma county courts have power to approve deeds by full-blood heirs where the original allottees died before May 27, 1908, and that the approval of the secretary is not necessary to such deeds and knocking out the opinion of former Attorney General Wickersham which held the opposite view the United States circuit court of appeals Monday handed down a decision which clears clouds on titles to $25,000,000 worth of land in eastern Oklahoma. The circuit court of appeals has affirmed an earlier opinion in the case handed down by Federal Judge Ralph E. Campbell.

The case involved the construction of section 9 of the act of May 27, which provided that the death of any allottee of the Five Civilized tribes should operate to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of said allottee's land provided that no conveyance of the interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land should be valid unless approved by a court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the state of the deceased allottee.

Notice of Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution, to me directed and delivered, issued out of the District Court of Pontotoc County, Oklahoma, in an action wherein the Art Brass Company, a corporation is plaintiff, and W. W. Dags is the defendant, said action originated in the Justice Court, before H. J. Brown, Justice of the Peace, an abstract of said judgment having been filed in the office of the clerk of the District Court of Pontotoc County, Oklahoma. I will on the 2nd day of Aug., 1918, between the hours of eight o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m. on said date at the court house door in county aforesaid, offer at public sale and sell to the highest bidder for cash in hand the following described property, to-wit: One lot of bath room fixtures which is more fully shown by the execution and appraisal which are referred to for more definite description, said property having been levied on as the property of the said W. W. Dags and taken on execution in favor of the Art Brass Company.
Dated this 23rd day of July, 1918.

A WORD FROM AGENT A. L. KENNEDY

I take this means of extending my thanks and appreciation to the business men of Ada for their hearty co-operation given me since I have been engaged in the U. S. Demonstration work. I assure you one and all that I have put forth every effort to render efficient service. As to how well I have performed that duty I shall leave to the farmers whom I have regularly visited and assisted by advising as to the most practical cultural methods to insure a better crop.

I wish also to thank them for their hearty co-operation in applying the methods recommended and trust that my successor will be given the same loyal support which I have been given. In resigning my position I do so with a feeling of great regret as I realize that I shall greatly miss the pleasant associations with a large number of Pontotoc County's most practical farmers. I shall ever remember the many acts of kindness shown me while in your homes, and I must add here that I shall ever hold a warm place in my heart towards the people of Ada.

R. E. Blanks and family and Mrs. A. B. Blanks have returned from their two weeks fishing trip to Blue. They were rained on twice while gone and were caught in the rain Saturday afternoon while en route to Ada. Mr. Blanks reports very good luck fishing.

SCHOOL TERM MAY BE SHORTENED

At its session Monday the county excise board cut the estimate for the city schools of Ada some $1215, this being necessary in order to keep the levy within the five mill limit. To go above that figure would necessitate a special election and the board did not appear to favor that. This reduction in the estimate will probably result in the school term being cut from two weeks to a month.

CLEAN TOWN CONTEST

STABLES.
In making this clean up campaign one essential point has been overlooked; that is barn yards. People who keep any stock are urged to co-operate at once by cleaning the stable and lot thoroughly and at once. Be sure to have the manure hauled off for manure piles will bring our town's marking down quicker than anything else, almost, for the manure pile is by long odds the fly's first choice for a breeding place. This is particularly true

How to Get Rid of Eczema

An Effective Method that Kills the Germs and Makes New Skin.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

If you bruise your hand, you will notice that a scab forms, and when it falls off, new skin has formed. Did you know that? No! Skin is the same as muscle, bone, sinew, ligament. All are made from the blood, from the materials that your stomach and intestines convert from food into what we call blood. And this blood circulates in the myriad of tiny blood vessels in the skin. Start from your stomach, where blood materials begin, and it won't be long before you are free of eczema. Use S. S. S. for a short time, and not only will eczema disappear, but the entire blood will be renewed. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy, judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 139 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Beware of any attempt to sell you something "just as good."

of horse manure. So please take hold and shove this movement ahead by cleaning up your barn and lot tomorrow.

Stores and Offices.

The merchants and others are urged to speed the cleaning of their stores. The same is true of public buildings. We want our down town district to present the best appearance possible. So please shine the windows and clean generally beginning as soon as possible.

Neglected Spots.

It will be a great assistance to completing the cleaning of Ada if any resident sees a place slighted by people supposed to be doing a thorough job for the city if they will call up a committee member and report the same. The authorities in charge of this work cannot be every place at once. Please help inspect.

NOTE ON GRAVEL AMENDMENT

Oklahoma City, Ok., July 28.—The sand and gravel amendment to the constitution passed by the Fourth Legislature in special session will not be submitted to a vote of the people. The supreme court late today denied the writ of mandamus asked for by Senator Campbell Russell against the State Election Board to require the board to print the ballots on the question which had been certified to it by the Secretary of State.

After an all-day argument the court held that the general law governing submission of questions to the people had not been complied with. It was pointed out that the law requires the filing of arguments for and against a proposition and their distribution within the time fixed by law so the people could be informed as to merits and that there had been no attempt to comply with this feature of ### the statute.

The sand and gravel amendment was ordered submitted by the legislature on the thirty-eighth day following its passage, whereas the statute requires forty days intervening, and while the court did not pass on this question, it was held that in absence of arguments being filed, the statute had not been complied with. Neither, it was held, did the relator, Senator Russell, show that he had a clear legal right to the writ.

Added to its holding that provisions of the law had not been followed, the court cited its former decision that the initiative and referendum provisions of the constitution were not self-operative, therefore, the court said, should it be contended that the general statute did not apply to matters such as the legislature submits, then there was no law touching the subject and the writ could not be granted.

Two members of the court, according to announcement of Chief Justice Hayes, were of the opinion that the subject matter of the resolution was legislative, and did not fall within the rule of constitutional provisions. Since the governor had not submitted the question for consideration at the special session, the legislature was without power to consider it.

The court added that had the resolution been a constitutional amendment, the governor's message to the legislature permitting it to suggest such amendments as it saw proper would have conferred upon the legislature ample authority for its enactment.

Gov. Cruce contended that the sand and gravel resolution was statutory and he disapproved the legislature's action for the reason he had not opened the question by message.

BAY STATE POLITICS

A CHINESE PUZZLE

Boston, Mass., July 29.—Lines are being drawn for one of the most interesting state campaigns in the history of Massachusetts. In the Bay State this fall an entire state ticket, both branches of the legislature and numerous county officers are to be chosen at the polls. The campaign is now on for the nominations, which will be made at a general primary two months hence.

At present the political situation appears to be in the worst possible mud. The confusion that now prevails may be said to arise wholly from the attitude of Governor Foss, who is now serving his third term. The governor is expected to be a candidate for a fourth term. But, strange as it may seem, even his most intimate political associates do not know whether he will seek the democratic nomination or the republican nomination, or whether he will pass up both parties and run independently.

Though elected three times on the democratic ticket, Governor Foss is undoubtedly out of sympathy with the democratic party at present. His public statements say that he believes the democratic policy of tariff revision is no better than the republican policy as evidenced on the Aldrich bill. The governor is first, last and all the time fighting for reciprocal trade relations with foreign countries.

There is no question but that in the past few weeks the governor has been sparring with the republicans, and this has given rise to the belief in some circles that he may enter the republican primaries. The governor was a strong republican until a few years ago, when he accepted a democratic nomination for congress, and many democrats accuse him of still being a republican at heart. The governor has lent countenance to this by his recognition of republicans in his appointments and by the fact that he has sent for many of the republican leaders to talk over the situation. At the present time one of his republican friends is circulating petitions to have his name placed on the republican primary ballot, but whether with or without the governor's sanction is not known.

There is a growing belief that the only logical course for governor Foss to pursue is to run as an independent candidate. And it is believed the governor himself is inclined to take this view. It is doubtful if he could poll anything like the full party strength on either the democratic or republican tickets. But by running independently it is figured that he could draw a considerable element from both parties.

As an independent candidate the governor probably would make a reform in the labor situation his big local issue. He maintains that the leadership of organized labor in Massachusetts and throughout the country is corrupt, and that the members of organized labor would support any movement for reform within the organization.

With the democratic party more or less disrupted over Governor Foss the republicans believe they have a good chance of reclaiming the Bay State at the fall election. The democratic nomination for governor is expected to go to Lieutenant Governor David I. Walsh. Last year Mr. Walsh withdrew from the fight for the democratic nomination for governor because he believed that Governor Foss was entitled on his record to another term. Mr. Foss was reelected and Mr. Walsh was elected the first democratic lieutenant governor in the history of the state. In announcing his candidacy for governor this year Mr. Walsh declared he had the assurance of Governor Foss that he (Governor Foss) would not seek renomination on the democratic ticket. Mr. Walsh is expected to receive the support of the regular democratic organization.

The republicans enter the campaign handicapped by the lack of a strong candidate and the opposition of the progressives. Colonel Everett C. Benton is the only avowed candidate for the republican gubernatorial nomination, and there appears to be little doubt but that he will receive the nomination without opposition. Colonel Benton has the reputation of being an able business man, but is with out experience in public life. Last year he was an unsuccessful candidate for the republican nomination.

Just what figure the Progressives will cut in the fight for the governorship is problematical. The party organization now has several thousand nomination papers out throughout the state, and an attempt is to be made to file for all county as well as state offices. The progressives have started off in earnest, and despite the fact that the enrollment of the party is relatively small, every member throughout the state is being canvassed for his signature. The progressive nomination for the governorship will go without opposition to Charles Sumner Bird, who is already busy on the stump throughout the state. Mr. Bird is a conservative business man and a noble politician and has admittedly developed much strength.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

SYNOPSIS

The teller of the story, Molly Carter, a young widow, awaiting the return of Al Bennett, an old flame, who is now a distinguished diplomat, tries to reduce weight. Her physician, adviser and next door neighbor is Dr. John, a widower and father of young Billy, whom Molly loves.

Molly is surprised at play with Billy by Judge Wade, who is the most dignified and able man in Hillsboro. Billy comes over from next door with his father.

Hillsboro receives a visit from Ruth Chester, a friend of Bennett, and Molly finds her delightful. Molly goes to the city for an outfit of clothing.

Molly has trouble in reducing her weight. Billy's singing of an old love song about "Molly" under her window brings tears to her eyes.

She flirts with Tom Pollard, her cousin, who is a "ladies' man." She decides to re-enter Hillsboro society by giving a dinner. The doctor catches her eating forbidden jam.

Dr. John and Molly pay a visit to one of his patients, a young mother. She doesn't know whom she really wants to marry, but thinks she will accept Bennett. Tom invites Molly to a dance.

Of all Molly's dances the one with Dr. John pleases her most. Preparations for the dinner are under way. Bennett is almost due in Hillsboro. Billy eats too much and becomes sick.

At the dinner, which is a great success, Molly receives a telegram from Bennett asking permission to come to Hillsboro immediately.

Judge Wade sends Molly a love letter, which Molly thinks is too long and formal. Billy tells Molly he and his father are going to Europe. Molly disputes the doctor's right to flirt with Billy.

"What do you mean, John Moore, by darning—daring to think you can go and take Billy away from me?" I demanded, looking at him with what must have been such fear and madness in my face that he was startled as he came close to the table against which I leaned. His face had grown white and quiet at my attack, and he waited to answer for a long, horrible minute that pulled me apart like one of those inquisition machines they used to torture women with when they didn't know any better modern way to do it.

"I didn't know Bill would tell you so soon, Mrs. Molly," he said at last gently, looking past me out of the window into the garden. "I was coming over just as soon as I got back from this call to talk with you about it, even if it did seem to intrude Bill's and my affairs into a day that—that ought to be all yours to be—happy in. But Bill, you see, is no respecter of—of other people's happy days if he wants them in his."

"Billy's happy days are mine, and mine are his, and he has the heart not to leave me out even if you would have him!" I exclaimed, a sob gathering in my heart at the thought that my little lover hadn't even taken in a situation that would separate him from me across an ocean.

"Bill is too young to understand when he is—being bereaved, Molly," he said, and still he didn't look at me. "I have been appointed a delegate to represent the State Medical association at the centennial congress in London the middle of next month, and somehow I feel a bit pulled lately, and I thought I would take the little chap and have—have a 'wanderjahr.' You won't need him now, Mrs. Peaches, and I couldn't go without him, could I?" The sadness in his voice would have killed me if I hadn't let it madden me instead.

"Won't need Billy any more?" I exclaimed, with a rage that made my voice literally scorch past my lips. "Was there ever a minute in his life that I haven't needed Billy? How dare you say such a thing to me? You are cruel, cruel, and I have always known it—cold and cruel like all other men who don't care how they wring the life blood out of women's hearts and are willing to use their children to do it with. Even the law doesn't help us poor helpless creatures, and you can take our children and go with them to the ends of the earth and leave us suffering. I have gone on and believed that you were not like what the women say all men are and that you cared whether you hurt people or not, but now I see that you are just the same, and you'll take my baby away if you want to, and I can do nothing to prevent it—nothing in the wide world. I am completely and absolutely helpless. You coward, you!"

When that awful word, the worst word that a woman can use to a man, left my lips a flame shot up into his eyes that I thought would burn me up, but in a half second it was extinguished by the strangest thing in the world—for the situation—a perfect flood of mirth. He sat down in his chair and shook all over, with his head in his hands, until I saw tears creep through his fingers. I had calmed down so suddenly that I was about to begin to cry in good earnest when he wiped his eyes and said, with a low laugh in his throat:

"The case is yours, Molly, settled out of court, and the 'pensation' also points of the law clause' works in some cases for a woman against a man. Generally speaking anyway, the pup belongs to the man who can whistle him down, and you can whistle Bill from me any day. I'm just his father, and what I think or want doesn't matter. You had better take him and keep him."

"I intend to," I answered haughtily, uncertain as to whether I had better give in and be agreeable or stay prepared to cry in case there was further argument. But suddenly a strange diffidence came into his eyes, and he looked away from me as he said in queer, hesitating words:

"You see, Mrs. Molly, I thought from now on your life wouldn't have exactly a place for Bill. Have you considered that you have trained him to demand you all the time and all of you? How would you manage Bill—and—other claims?"

LEAF ELEVENTH.

A Heart of Gold.

IF there is a contagious thing in this world it is an embarrassment. I never felt anything worse in all my life than the shame that swept over me in a great hot wave when that look came into his eyes and made me realize just exactly what I had been saying to him, about what, and how I had said it. I stood perfectly still, shook all over like a leaf and wondered if I would ever be able to raise my eyes from the ground. A dizzy, nauseated feeling for myself rose up in me against myself, and I was just about to turn on my heels and leave him, I hoped forever, when he came over and laid his hand on my shoulder.

"Molly," he said in a voice that might have come down from heaven on dove wings, "you can't for a moment feel or think that I don't realize and appreciate what you have been to the motherless little chap, and for life I am yours at command, as he is. I really thought it would be a relief to you to have him taken away from you for just a little while right now, and I still think it is best, but not unless you consent. You shall have him back whenever you are ready for him, and at all times both he and I are at your service to the whole of our kingdoms. Just think the matter over, won't you, and decide what you want me to do?"

Something in me died forever, I think, when he spoke to me like that. He's not like other men, and there aren't any other men on earth but him! All the rest are just bugs or bats or something worse. And I'm not anything myself. There's no excuse for my living, and I wish I wasn't so healthy and likely to go on doing it. It was all over, and there was nothing left for me to live for, and before I could stop myself I buried my face in my hands.

"Billy asked me to go with him on this awful whale hunt!" I sobbed out to comfort myself with the thought that somebody did care for me, regardless of just how I was further embarrassing and complicating myself in the affairs of the two men I had thought I owned and was now finding out that I had to give up. I wish I had been looking at him, for I felt him start, but he said in his big friendly voice that is so much—and never enough for me—

"Well, why not you and Al come along and make it a family party, if that is what suits Bill, the boss?"

If men would just buy good, sharp kitchen knives and cut out women's hearts in a businesslike way it would be so much kinder of them. Why do they prefer to use dull weapons that maul the life out slowly? Everything is at an end for me tonight, and that blow did it. It was a horrible cruel thing for him to say to me! I know now that I have been in love with John Moore for longer than my honor lets me admit and that I'll never love anybody else, and that also I have offered myself to him served up in every known enticement and have to be refused at least twice a day for a year. A widow can't say she didn't understand what she was doing, even to herself, but—my humiliation is complete, and the only thing that can make me ever hold up my head is to puzzle him by—by happily marrying Alfred Bennett—and quick!

Of course he must suspect how I feel about him, for two people couldn't both be so ignorant as not to see such an enormous thing as my love for him is, and I was the blind one. But he must never, never know that I ever realized it, for he is so good that it would distress him. I must go on in my foolish way with him until I can get away. I'll tell him I'm sorry I was so indignant tonight and say that I think it will be fine for him to take my Billy away from me with him. I must smile at the idea of having my very soul amputated. Insist that it is the only thing to do and pack up the little soul in a steamer trunk with the smile. Just smile, that is all. Life demands smiles from a woman, even if she must crush their perfume from her own heart, and she generally has them ready.

Oh, Molly, Molly! Is it for this you came into the world—twice to give yourself without love? What difference does it make that your arms are strong and white if they can't clasp him to the softness and fragrance of your breast? Why are your eyes blue pools of love if they are not for his questioning, and what are your rose lips for if they quench not his thirst?

Yes, I know God is very tender with a woman, and I think he understands, so if she crept very close to him and caught at his sleeve to steady herself he would be kind to her until she could go on along her own steep way. Please, God, never let him find out, for it would hurt him to have hurt me!

A year after the divorce Lauterbach indignantly denied he had sustained friendly relations with Mrs. Philip Van Valkenburg, widely known as the $10,000,000 widow. Mrs. Van Valkenburg, who lived at the St. Regis, was being sued for a picture that Samuel J. Wolf, an artist, had painted. Lauterbach was a witness, and Alexander Strouse, counsel for the artist, asked Lauterbach to explain his relations with Mrs. Philip Van Valkenburg.

Papers toasted the lawyer for his defense in heated fashion, of the woman of fashion and means. Later it was stated that Philip Van Valkenburg had named Lauterbach in some way in a divorce suit he had filed in a double-barreled proceeding in which each of the Van Valkenburgs sued the other.

The truth concerning these matters was never made public.

JUDGE S. HEARD

DIES AT ST. LOUIS

Judge S. Heard, father of N. T. Heard, tax assessor of Pontotoc county, occurred Monday at 1 o'clock at St. Luke's hospital in St. Louis. His death was due to heart disease with which he had been troubled for a long time. He went to St. Louis, where two of his children reside, some weeks ago, hoping that he might find some relief, but his condition was beyond aid of medical skill. The body will be brought back to Ada and the funeral and interment will take place Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at Rosedale cemetery.

Judge Heard was 67 years of age. He was a native of Mississippi and was an active participant in the long struggle that resulted in the overthrow of carpet bag rule in reconstruction days. A mere boy when the civil war broke out, he enlisted in the Confederate army at the age of 16 and served with conspicuous gallantry as became a brave son of Mississippi during the last two years of the fierce struggle.

At the close of the war he turned his attention to the law and was recognized as a leader of the bar, and served both as a member of the legislature and as circuit judge.

Later he went to Texas and resided at Cleburne and Paris several years.

About three years ago he moved to Stonewall and then to Ada, making his home with his son.

Judge Heard was a typical gentleman of the old school of the South which is so rapidly passing away. Affable, polished in his manner and the soul of honor he held the esteem and high regard of all who had the good fortune to know him.

He is survived by a widow and six children, Shannon of Pictou, Colo., Landon of Oklahoma City, N. T., of Ada, Mrs. Prentiss Merrill of Dallas, Mrs. William Sachs and Miss Catherine Heard of St. Louis.
